Dr. Deborah Pettit, Louisa County Public Schools division superintendent, was instrumental in getting the Moss-Nuckols Elementary School building into the construction phase.

Moss-Nuckols Elementary School will be Louisa County's fourth elementary school. The building will have a capacity of 700 students and will accommodate the needs of a growing county.

The Louisa County School Board voted unanimously on April 3, 2007 to name the school Moss-Nuckols Elementary, in honor of two admired former educators- Henry Spurgeon Moss and Harry L. Nuckols.

Many county residents believe that both educators strove to provide students with the best education possible and were instrumental in the desegregation of Louisa County Public Schools.

- Henry Moss, who died on March 18, 2000, was an active member in the Louisa County school system for 41 years. He initially was a teacher of science, social studies, chemistry, and biology. He later served a dual role as vice-principal and guidance counselor at A.G. Richardson High School from 1953 until 1959 and as vice-principal at the Louisa Training School.
- Harry Nuckols, who died on March 14, 2002, began his career as a teacher at Shannon Hill Elementary School, but was promoted to assistant principal at A. G. Richardson High School, where he also taught math. In 1969, he transferred to Louisa County High School as vice-principal and retired in 1991.

Moss-Nuckols Elementary School's mascot will be a fox and its colors will be blue and gray. The selections were based on responses received from students, the community and citizens' comments made during two public hearings on the matter.
